tural departments ages. As a case of the practiced that to draw out all bocomes the tier fresh or otherwise, between the first of October and the first of Marie, and spread it directly from the wagon or ded upon the ground, whether it be placed or amplored. There may be a dight danger of waste by wasting whore the manure was speed on steep lift, sides or upon an unusually deep full of spous; but this waste is much less in practice than in Heery, and need scarcely be a widded in most cases. In my experience, manure of the same quantity and quality, spread on the soil, in November, has given twenty per cent, better yield of cur than the same amount speed on immediately before plowing in the spring. My reasons for winter manuring are strent: The manure has to be handled but once, and that at a time when work is not prassing and time therefore not so valuable, The two Marcheson Contrasted-Legal Twps of War-The Great Bubate.

The two most prominent men in Illinois at that time (1859) were Douglas and Limoola. Each was in the full maturity of his powers, Douglas being 45° and Lincola 49 years old. Douglas hadfor years been trained on the stump, in the lower house of congress and in the senate to meet in depart the ablost speakers in the state and nation. For years he high been accessfunded, on the floor of the entitle, to recointer the leaders of the old whig and free soil parties. Among them were Neward and Trumboll, and Hale, and Summer and actors squally eminent, and his enthusiastic triends insisted that never, either in single conflict or when receiving the assault of a whole party, had be been discomfited. His style was hold, vigorous and aggressive, and at time definite, if the was ready, fertile, in resources, Lamiliar, if the was ready, fertile in resources, Lamiliar, with political listory, terrible in demunication, and anotted with skill all weapons of debate. His from will, readless energy, unified with great personal magnetism, made him very nopularly and with these qualities he had indomined and with these qualities, he had indomined blooded, and moral courage, and his all most suniform; sheckes land given little profiler to rendence in himself.

Lincola was also a thoroughly trained speake a R. He had controlled successfully very affer or the read the successfully very filer. ones, and that at thise when work is not praising and time therefore not so valuable, and wins the fields are not wel, as in spring. The chief difficulty in spreading manure is to make it perfectly surfarm, so that the fortility of the soil shall be distinct, so that the fortility of the soil shall be distinct, by winter manuristic perfectly surface twice, as the ploving in spring performs a redistribution. As manuris usually long at least one-half, and frequently a greater proportion, is wasted by leachings and some of animotial practically. In this climate, the wastage of manure when spread in the winter at the field is very slight—the time tenth of what it is when left in the yard in a hot heap; and in this way also all the leachings are saved.

Joilbert Pish in St. Peni Presal.

Lean tell "Young France." I think how to keep his sows from eating their pigs. Give them plent of charculand woodsadies, and keep if in the peni all flortime, so they can holy thomselves—he will be surprised at the amount they will eat. Give sait occasionally—say once a week, and give raw vegetables of some kind very week. People should remember that he wild state they had free acress to all such things. I have raised hogs for 15, years, and the sows did not yeen eat op the pignishar were horn dead. I would recommend every man that is raising pigs to get Harris Oh the Pig. or some other equally good work and he will save enough to pay him in every litter of pighls sowd raise.

Lincoln was also a thoroughly trained speaker. He had contended successfully year after year, at the bar and on the stump, with the altest men of 'Himself,'Including Lamborn-Logary Join Calhoun and others, and had often spect. Douglas himself—a conflict which he always rather courted that shumed. Indeed, these two great orators had often tested each other's power, and whonever they did neet it was indeed. "Greek meeting Greek," and he was good of the confidence of the capacity of the confidence of the confidence of the capacity of the confidence of the capacity o In a speech of alr. Lincoln in 1856, he made the deflowing beautiful, doquent and generous allusian to Douglas. He said: "Twenty years ago.
